

MA Development Studies, School of Development Studies IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR APPLICANTS

School of Development Studies (SDS)

School of Development Studies was one among the first Schools that were created at Ambedkar University Delhi. Over the years the School has made its presence felt in India and abroad by intensely engaging with different development questions from an interdisciplinary perspective.

Ambedkar University Delhi began its operation by offering a Post Graduate Diploma in Development Studies. At present, School of Development Studies offers a MA and PhD in Development Studies. Both the programmes equip students with the ability to do research and address the challenges of development and public policy as they affect developing societies. The programmes are structured around development theory, an understanding of growth and development, and broad debates around the structures of economic and political arrangements epitomised by states, markets and society.

MA Development Studies

The two-year MA Development Programme is transacted through classroom lectures, workshops, seminars, and field projects. The programme emphasizes research and analytical skills, oral and written communication, and exposure to development practice. The programme lays a strong emphasis on training students in social research in the broad space of development.

Programme structure

Core (Compulsory) Courses: 8 (Total credits: 32)

Optional/Elective Courses: 22 credits

Internship: 2 credits

Dissertation (including 2 credits Dissertation Writing Workshop course): 8 credits

Each course offered under this programme is structured around a range of topics (or modules). Whereas 4 credit courses are transacted through 4 contact hours each week throughout the semester, 2-credit courses involve 2 contact hours per week for the whole semester or 4 contact hours per week for half semester. Study modules are a combination of lectures, student presentations and classroom discussions. Students are expected to read 50-100 pages for each module. Optional courses are offered in the areas of expertise of faculty members. Guest faculty is frequently invited to supplement the knowledge and provide exposure to the world of practice. Faculty members of SDS are actively involved in mentoring and guiding students for course work, internship, and dissertation. While the teaching schedule includes specified hours for classroom interaction, students are encouraged to consult faculty members outside the classroom space. Students with language difficulties receive special attention from faculty members. When possible, field trips are organised keeping academic interest in mind.

Field trips involve close interaction with and teaching of students in an extra-mural environment.

Careers

After successful completion of the MA in Development Studies programme, it is expected that graduates will be equipped to work in development organisations, government agencies, corporations and financial institutions, non-government organisations, consultancy firms, civil society initiatives, media, and academia.
